Magdalena Hoerst is an expert in climate change adaptation and climate risk management. She focuses on mainstreaming climate change into projects and planning and provides trainings for decision-makers and development cooperation professionals in this field. In her work as consultant, she facilitated processes across Africa and Asia to incorporate climate change risks in project planning and implementation. This expertise forms the foundation of her training approach to provide course participants with hands-on tools to make the integration of climate change response option a meaningful, interesting, and easy task in their working contexts.
